HOT WATER HEATER REPLACEMENT AT REGAN BUILDING

Replacement of Water Heaters- Regan Building, Pastore Center, Cranston, RI

The State of Rhode Island currently owns and operates the Regan Building (building #60). The Regan Building is one of the groups of buildings that are part of the Eleanor Slater Hospital. The Regan Building was constructed in 1980 and currently accommodates hospital patients and the administration for hospital operations. The hospital is occupied and operated by the RI Department of Behavioral Healthcare, Developmental Disabilities and Hospitals (BHDDH).

The Regan Building's domestic hot water system consists of (2) steam operated hot water heaters each with a 1000 gallon storage tank, supply and recirculation piping, and associated pumps and appurtenances. The water heaters are vertical P-K (Harsco) Series 500 Control-Flo® reverse flow with serial numbers 256907, 256908. One heater has failed and has been inspected for repairs to the tank. The heater was deemed non-repairable and isolated from the hot water system. The second water heater is functional but due to its age is expected to have reached the end of its service life and also requires replacement. Each heater is rated at 1500 GPH with a temperature rise of 40 degrees F to 140 degrees F.

The State of Rhode Island Department of Administration Division of Facilities Management is seeking proposals from qualified mechanical contractors for the replacement of both domestic hot water heaters and associated piping and appurtenances required for a fully functional domestic water heating system. Due to the sensitive nature of hospital operations, both heaters are required for redundancy and storage capacity. Additionally, the two domestic hot water heaters are of critical importance during steam supply down times.

Vendors should note that both the completeness of scope and the timely completion of this project are of paramount importance to the State. In addition to a project cost, vendors are requested to provide a milestone schedule for consideration by the Division of Facilities Management prior to project award. Though price will ultimately be the determining factor in selecting the awarded vendor, the Division of Facilities Management reserves the right to reject any proposal which is incomplete or contains a schedule that is deemed excessive by comparison to those of other vendors.
